

Michael Dinerstein is an Assistant Professor in the Kenneth C. Griffin Department of Economics and the College at The University of Chicago (2015-current). He is a member of the Committee on Education at the university (since 2019), a Faculty Research Fellow at the National Bureau of Economic Research (since 2016) and an Affiliate with CESifo (since 2019). He earned both a Ph.D. and M.A. in Economics from Stanford University in 2015 and 2012, respectively.

Dinerstein earned the 2013-14 Shultz Graduate Student Fellowship in Economic Policy (Stanford Institute for Economic Policy Research-SIEPR) and the 2014-15 Shaw-Haley Graduate Fellowship (SIEPR).

Dinerstein's research concerns public economics with an emphasis on education and industrial organization. His most recently published papers in American Economic Review include, "Competition and Entry in Agricultural Markets: Experimental Evidence from Kenya" and "Consumer Price Search and Platform Design in Internet Commerce". He was awarded grants from the Institute of Education Sciences, Department of Education (July 2019-June 2021), The University of Chicago and Chapin Hall Joint Research Fund (May 2019-March 2021) and the Becker Friedman Institute, Research Grants for the Economic Effects of Coronavirus (May 2020).