Spotlight on Economics Faculty Rising Stars Alessandra Voena and Ufuk Akcigit

Alessandra Voena
Voena is an Associate Professor in the Kenneth C. Griffin Department of Economics. Her research focuses on the economics of family, labor, and development, and she is actively engaged in research in the United States and around the world.

“My primary field is labor economics, and I’m specifically interested in how families make their economic decisions, for example about whether or not to work, about how many children to have, about their education, etc. In graduate school, I started doing work in Zambia, and I am continuing that work today.

I’m very interested in how family decisions and family structure affect investments in children. For example, I’ve coauthored a document that in countries like Zambia where monetary transfers take place at the time of marriage that reward parents for educating their daughters (anthropologists call them bride price payments), female education rates are higher and government programs meant to increase the supply of schools are much more effective than when parents cannot capture any of the returns to education that their daughters can accrue.”

In 2017, she received the Alfred P. Sloan Fellowship, and was given the Carlo Alberto Medal, an honor awarded biennially to an outstanding Italian economist under the age of 40. Learn more about her research at sites.google.com/site/alevoena/.

Ufuk Akcigit
Ufuk Akcigit is an Assistant Professor in the Kenneth C. Griffin Department of Economics, as well as the Director of Graduate Placement. He received an NSF Career Award entitled “Understanding Economic Growth: Firms, Inventors, and Ideas.” Learn more about his research at ufukakcigit.com.

UFUK AKCIGIT
“Technological progress and innovation are the central determinants of economic growth. As a macroeconomist, the main focus of my research has been to understand the exact links between innovation and economic growth and to study the optimal policies to bolster them. The mapping between innovation and economic growth can be described broadly as Firms>Inventors>Ideas>Aggregate Growth, where firms hire inventors to produce new ideas and technologies which lead to economic growth.

In line with this mapping, my research topics can be broadly grouped into three categories: firm studies, inventor studies, and idea (patent) studies. I have been a big proponent of the idea that our understanding of macroeconomic growth and technological progress can be significantly improved by combining micro and macro perspectives. A macroeconomy is made of micro firms that hire inventors to produce new innovative ideas. Therefore, my research - by focusing on the microeconomics of firms, inventors, and ideas - has aimed to shed light on economic growth by capturing the rich heterogeneity in innovation behavior at the firm level by using the wealth of information on firms and their innovations.”
MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR

The Griffin Gift is a commitment to the science of economics and research that confronts society’s most pressing issues, and will play a major role in helping us develop solutions to the problems affecting society in the best possible ways we can.

Dear Alumni and Friends,

Nearing the end of 2017, we reflect on a remarkable period of expansion, renewal, and growth in our Department. In short, it is a great moment for Chicago Economics. Over the past several years, we’ve welcomed many new faculty members, each bringing their own unique background and scholarly perspectives to the table, creating an environment where we cultivate our cherished Chicago tradition of free expression, critical discussion, and vigorous debate.

Another key part of the Chicago Economics equation is our students. Our Ph.D. program increasingly draws the world’s most promising and driven students, those who will seek and find innovative solutions to challenging fundamental problems. Each year, our Ph.D. candidates bring to the job market the sum of their years of rigorous scholarship, teaching experience, and research study to become the next generation of leaders and research that confronts society’s most pressing issues.

Three years ago we moved into our beautiful new building, which now has truly become the Department’s home. Saieh Hall for Economics is a renowned international center for collaboration; a stately, inviting gathering space engineered to foster scholarly conversations, partnerships, and possibilities. This year we hosted the 2017 Advances with Field Experiments Conference and the 2017 Summer Institute on Field Experiments, the latter an intensive five-day institute partnering the brightest young researchers with organizational practitioners interested in using field experiments and behavioral economics to answer compelling business questions.

This year also marked the return of the 4th Science of Diversity and Inclusion Initiative Conference (SODI), an intensive five-day conference designed to encourage experimental research on charitable giving, and to provide an avenue for research discussions. We also welcomed the inaugural 2017 Summer Institute on Field Experiments, the latter an intensive five-day institute partnering the brightest young researchers with organizational practitioners interested in using field experiments and behavioral economics to answer compelling business questions.

The unifying thread in all our endeavors—pedagogy or research—is the conviction that Economics is a powerful tool to understand everything around us. In this spirit, I am happy to announce a defining moment in Chicago Economics history—Kenneth C. Griffin’s generous support of the Department of Economics. The support enables us to expand our leadership in education and research with wide-ranging public significance, while increasing financial support for our expansion of faculty and students. Whether the issue is educating children, preventing wars, or fueling life-changing innovation, it’s difficult to find an area of life or human problem that isn’t grounded in economics. Ken’s gift opens up doors in every arena.

For this reason, I am not going to ask for your support of The Chairman’s Fund for Economics this year. Rather, I hope that you will consider our emerging needs and challenges concerning our junior faculty. I invite you to read this issue’s Spotlight on Economics Faculty Rising Stars: Alessandra Voena and Ufuk Akcigit” from our Generation Next section of our newsletter. As you can see, Alessandra and Ufuk, our featured faculty, are exceptionally talented. It is for this reason that this year, I hope that you will donate to the Chairman’s Fund, which will be earmarked to solely supporting their research. Please indicate on your gift card or on the website, how your donation should be directed.

Thank you in advance and best wishes for the holidays.

Sincerely,

John List
Chairman and the Kenneth C. Griffin Distinguished Service Professor in Economics and the College

THE KENNETH C. GRIFFIN GIFT

“ I am proud to support the incredible economics department at the University of Chicago...So many of the great thought leaders that have shaped economics — Gary Becker, Milton Friedman — what an unbelievable success story they’ve had in their field.” — Kenneth C. Griffin and other fields would see similar outcomes. “Changing the p-value threshold is simple, aligns with the training undertaken by many researchers and might quickly achieve broad acceptance,” the authors said. The argument represents the consensus of 72 scholars from institutions throughout the world and from a variety of disciplines, and could have a major effect on the publication of academic work and on public policy.

LARRY A. SJAASTAD FUND WILL SUPPORT GRADUATE FELLOWSHIPS

A graduate fellowship fund in memory of Professor Larry A. Sjaastad has been created in the Kenneth C. Griffin Department of Economics at the University of Chicago through a generous gift. Sjaastad, a professor emeritus of economics and a leading expert on trade in Latin America, died on May 2, 2012 at the age of 77. He made fundamental contributions to economics across a wide spectrum of topics including public finance, international economics, and exchange rate theory. Among his many accomplishments, Sjaastad helped organize the Latin American Workshops at the University of Chicago. The Larry A. Sjaastad Economics Graduate Fellowship Fund will provide endowed support to students in economics with an interest in Argentinean, Latin American, and South American economies. If you are interested in supporting this fund, please contact Blake Davis, Managing Director of Development, at blaked@uchicago.edu or 773.702.7175.

JOHN LIST RECEIVES HARTSOOK GROWING PHILANTHROPY AWARD

At the 4th Science of Philanthropy Initiative Conference held September 6-7 at Saieh Hall for Economics, Prof. John List was presented the prestigious Hartsook Growing Philanthropy Award for his pioneering work using field experiments to explore the motivations behind charitable giving and social preferences that shape it. Prof. List was also named the Visiting Robert F. Hartsook Chair in Fundraising at the Indiana University Lilly Family School of Philanthropy. In an interview in the Non-Profit Times, Robert F. Hartsook, J.D., Ed.D., Chairman and CEO of Hartsook Companies stated “John List’s leadership in applied fundraising research from his University of Chicago role has propelled him into worldwide recognition. For Indiana to attract this talented professor and his network has created high expectations for the impact of the Hartsook Chair and the school in growing philanthropy.” Photo bottom right: Hartsook Chief Academic Officer Karin Cox and CEO Matthew J. UChicago Griffin Economics Partners with MAPSS Program

The Griffin Department of Economics is now partnering with the Division of Social Sciences’ Master of Arts Program in Social Sciences, offering a new graduate study option: the MAPSS Economics concentration, a Master’s-level course of study alongside Chicago faculty incorporating an intensive mathematical and analytical approach. Prospective students who declare Economics as their primary field must have prior exposure to real analysis, econometrics, and advanced coursework in multivariable calculus, linear algebra, probability, and statistics. Students will be supported in their course selections, choice of faculty advisor, and MA thesis by Victor Lima, Senior Lecturer in Economics, and by Min Sok Lee, Lecturer in Economics. Details at mapss.uchicago.edu. We are also proud to announce our first cohort of 22 students have graduated from the new program.

Journal of Political Economy Special Anniversary Issue

The Journal of Political Economy is pleased to announce their special forthcoming Anniversary Issue (vol. 125, no. 6), with contributions from Griffin Department of Economics and Booth School of Business faculty including Uluk Akcigit, Fernando Alvarez, Stéphane Bonhomme and Azcem Shaikh, David Galenson, Michael Greenstone, Lars Peter Hansen, James J. Heckman, Ali Hortaçsu, Greg Kaplan, Steve Levitt, John A. List, Robert E. Lucas, Jr., Magne Mogstad, Roger Myerson, Derek Neal, Philip J. Reny, Robert Shimer, Hugo Sonnenschein, Nancy L. Stokey, Harald Uhlig, and many others. The issue will be published December 2017.

The Arnold C. Harberger Professorship in Economics

This year marked the endowment of the Arnold C. Harberger Professorship in Economics, honoring the Gustavus F. and Ann M. Swift Distinguished Service Professor Emeritus in Economics, who has been at the University of Chicago since 1953. Faculty, administration, and alumni gathered in Saieh Hall to join him for a cordial celebration of his work and lasting influence on generations of economists around the world. EMERGENCY HURRICANE RELIEF FOR PUERTO RICO

We would like to thank everyone who contributed to our October Hurricane Maria Emergency Donation Drive for Puerto Rico Relief.

The University of Chicago community and friends donated crucial household necessities and made generous financial contributions through our partnership with Asociación Benefica Hijos de Borinquén. If you’d like to donate, or learn more, contact the nonprofit organization at (219) 425-3271. THE LONG RUN: THE UHLIG FAMILY CHICAGO MARATHON RUN

You may know Prof. Harald Uhlig from his long record of published research in macroeconomics and finance, his work as faculty member and former chair of the University of Chicago Department of Economics, or as lead editor of the Journal of Political Economy — but he also has a dedicated marathon runner for many years.

On October 7, his daughter Anjuli S. Uhlig (UChicago Class of ’13) joined him for the first time to run the grueling 2017 Chicago Marathon. “I finished in 4:14:39 and was pleased with that, especially since I had injuries that prevented me from training until about mid-August. Anjuli finished in 4:03:27, and I am very proud of her! We managed to run together until about the 17 mile mark...[h]e was her first Marathon, and a fantastic time. So, all in all a wonderful experience!”

HONORING LARS PETER HANSEN

On Friday, Oct. 6, University of Chicago’s Division of the Social Sciences, Chicago Booth, Harris Public Policy, and the Law School honored Lars Peter Hansen for his leadership of the Becker Friedman Institute for Research in Economics. Speakers included University of Chicago’s Executive Vice Provost Daniel Nierenberg, Provost Daniel Diermeier, Professor Emeritus Robert E. Lucas, Jr. and Professor Kevin Murphy. Professor Hansen was the founding director of the Friedman Institute in 2008, guiding the Institute through its evolution into the Becker Friedman Institute for Research in Economics in 2011, and to its new home in the Saich Hall for Economics in 2014.
